ABSTRACT

Present research work deal with synthesis of 5-p-tolylthiocarbamido-1-naphthol and check their antimicrobial activity against four human pathogens. This molecule was synthesized by condensation of 5-amino-1-naphthol with p-tolyl isothiocyanate in an acidic medium. Recently here focus to assay antimicrobial activity of this molecule against gram positive and gram negative human pathogen bacteria such as E. coli, Proteus vulgaris, P. aeruginosa and V. aureus. Comparatively L4 showed highly activity against E. coli rather than remaining three pathogens. This antimicrobial activity relationship confirmed that this compound is a potential candidate for future drugs discovery and development.

KEYWORDS: 5-p-tolylthiocarbamido-1-naphthol (L4), pathogenic bacteria, antimicrobial activity, disc diffusion method.
